Placing Artists

1st Place David Pollock Dramatic Architecture archival inkiet print on photo lustre paper

This photograph is from a portfolio that is primarily concerned with our relationship with nature mediated by culture. In my work, I often see both a beauty and strangeness as our culture seeks to contain, idealize and commodify the experience of nature.

2nd Place George Janousek The "Burbs" photographic print

This image was created from a colour digital photo of the suburbs landscape in Edmonton. I was trying to create a photograph that shows the human impact on the development of the landscape and create a simple but strong graphic image. To further emphasize this, I applied an antique solarisation filter.

I stage the pixel, the smallest unit constructing the digital image, as both medium and metaphor. I take photographs of my real-life environment through a process of digital de- and re-construction, creating an image that presents the viewer with various levels of pixelation. These moments of rupture play with the nature of digital photography as pixels on a grid, the capacity of the human mind to impute missing data, the image as a facade that signifies our desire and the ephemeral experience of nature.

Honourable Mention Shauna Davis

digital light jet print (detail shown)

Through my pressed (impressed) series I attempt to evoke a sense of the divide between civilization and nature. The work is an articulation of my desire to embody a sense of one's immediate physical relationship to a landscape and to underline the breakdown of the modern individual's personal connection with the Farth.

President's Message

Welcome to Earth Matters. For more than 20 years, the Arts Council of Surrey, in partnership with the Surrey Art Gallery, has been privileged to provide local and emerging artists with opportunities to celebrate their unique creative talents through juried art exhibitions.

Artists are among those with a growing interest in protecting the environment, achieving sustainability and appreciating the natural world. Earth Matters was developed to showcase artists' visions of the environment and their concerns for the future as expressed in photography. Developed as a companion showcase for the exhibition Edward Burtynsky: An Uneasy Beauty – Photographs of Western Canada, it showcases 39 works in digital and traditional photographic formats, by artists from Surrey and the surrounding region, that range from investigating the human impact on the environment to celebrating the wonders of nature and the landscape. As you view these wonderful images, I encourage you to read the statements and consider the artists' intentions.

I want to thank all the photographers who submitted their work; Earth Matters committee members and volunteers, especially Brian Foreman, Alice Klisch, Kay VanDeventer, and Jennifer Wyatt; the staff at the Surrey Art Gallery; and jurors Liane Davison, Evan Seal and Kira Wu.

Carol Girardi, President, Arts Council of Surrey

Jurors' Statement

Photographs have always been powerful—as documentation they persuade us to see the world around us in new or even profound ways. Artists also use the media of photography to poetically express thoughts and ideas in metaphors and in images, sharing experience or worldviews.

From 84 submissions, the 39 works were chosen based on technical merit, originality and innovation, expression of intellectual content or issues within the image clarity of expression, as well as responsiveness to the theme of the exhibition. The final selection of works offers a sample of the many possibilities and tools used in contemporary photography. Viewers will notice the increasing use of digital processes as well as the continued use of manual cameras and traditional printing methods.

We sincerely thank all of the artists who offered their work for this exhibition, and would like to thank the volunteers who made this opportunity for artists possible.
