About the Club

We are an inclusive organisation, and welcome professional and amateur photographers alike. No matter if you are a beginner or a published expert, you will find a place at our club meetings. Our members are interested in just about every type of photography, and you'll undoubtedly find someone who shares your passion. Club members have worked with local charities and non-profit organisations. We have successfully participated in local, national and international competitions, representing photographers from Surrey.

History

The inaugural meeting of the Surrey Photography Club took place at the Guildford Library on Tuesday 4th April 2006. Sheena Wilkie, a professional photographer living in Surrey had noted that many communities around the Lower Mainland had thriving photography clubs, but that Surrey was conspicuous by its absence. She felt that with the large and growing population, there was ample scope to have a club of our own, and started the ball rolling to correct the deficiency.

Responding to an advertisement placed in the Surrey Leader, more than 80 people attended that first meeting, and we were up and running!

Initially, our regular meetings took place at the Canadian Legion in Whalley but now our home is at St Helen's Anglican Church on 128 Street and 108 Avenue. Sheena has moved on to other pursuits, but the foundation has been laid and the executive is working hard to ensure we meet the needs of the photographic community in Surrey.

Our Goals

We aim to promote the art, to help people learn and enjoy their photography, and to share with our members, and those of other organisations, our appreciation of photography.

When we meet: 2nd and 4th Monday of each month (except public holidays)

Where we meet St Helen's Anglican Church Hall, 128 St & 108 Ave, Surrey

What we do:

- Show and critique member's images
- Hold Workshops
- Host Guest Speakers
- Provide support and assistance to beginners
- Enter Competitions (and do very well!)
- Participate in events and exhibitions
